Ladies' Jackets Join the Suit Exodus.

It's literally true what we said yesterday—"A positive and sweeping clearance of Ladies' Suits." And tomorrow the light weight Jackets follow. Both are active members of the summer wardrobe—but they soon should pass to second importance in stock. We'd rather relegate them out altogether than to the rear.

The Jackets Are in Four Lots.

Stylish Eton Jackets, in Black and colors, and sizes 32, 34 and 36, very latest cut; strictly tailored finish—with the actual values up to $8.50. $3.95.

Covered Cloth and Cavelot Eton Jackets, latest style. Etons, in Black and colored shades; actually worth up to $10. Sizes 32, 34 and 36. $4.95.

Ladies' Light-weight Jackets, mostly Etons, in Cover Cloth, Cavelot, Penn de Sole and Corded Taffeta $11.15; worth up to $12.50. $7.50.

Ladies' Eton, Open-front, Vest effects, and Fly-front Jackets, made up in tulle, tulle silk, fine broadcloth, worsted, etc. Black and colors and worth up to $16.50. $9.95.

PAROLE OF CRIMINALS

Conference of Charities and Correction Favors New Methods.

THE PLAN FOR DEALING WITH CRIME

Aid of Census Bureau in Securing Information Wanted.

INDETERMINATE SENTENCE

The general session of the national conference of charities and correction was held in the main hall of Columbian University this morning. The day's proceedings were opened with a business meeting, at which the conference adopted a resolution authorizing the president to appoint a committee of five to study the Director Merriam of the census bureau, and to act with him in an attempt to secure legislation permitting him to gather and compile for the conference statistics of crime not now available. This action was taken after Dr. F. H. Wines of the census bureau and a member of the conference had stated that Mr. Merriam was willing to co-operate to secure the end contemplated in the resolution. It was also after a discussion of a resolution providing for the creation in this city by the government of a permanent bureau of charities and correction, to gather and disseminate necessary information. The latter resolution was laid on the table and the proposition to have the work needed done through the census bureau was adopted as a more practical one.

President Glavin then appointed the committee provided for in the resolution at an early day.

The report of the committee on reports from states was then presented by the chairman, Mr. Hastings H. Hart. It reviewed briefly the work that has been done in the states of the Union in charitable and reformatory work.

Treatment of the Criminal.

At 10 o'clock the report of the committee on the treatment of the criminal was read by Dr. F. H. Wines, the chairman of the committee who rendered the report. The committee declared in favor of the indeterminate sentence, or imprisonment during a period necessary for such reformation that the criminal can be given liberty on parole or during good behavior.

"In this generation," the report stated, "a complete revolution is rapidly taking place in the method of dealing with criminals. The instances in which men are deterred from crime by the apprehension of legal punishment are but few. Such penalties may have some deterrent effect upon those who already have strong influence for good in their social position and associations, but not to any important extent upon habitual criminals.

"In the light of social science our penal codes are without consistency or justification. They have never been founded upon a reasoned system of thought, but have grown up as the result of circumstances and accidents. In most of the penal codes of the civilized world imprisonment is now, either exclusively or almost entirely, substituted for physical suffering in reformatory attempts have been made to graduate more accurately the degrees of criminality, in particular offenses, to define them with greater care, and to proportion the penalties to them with more relation to current conceptions of justice. But every such effort in its nature is doomed to failure. The particular act which is defined as an offense, which is proved to a jury, and made the basis of a verdict of guilty and of the sentence of the court, can in no case furnish a measure of the desert of him who commits it. The grossest inequalities in the terms of imprisonment assigned to different offenses are found in the comparative legislation of different states, and inequalities no less great in the judicial administration of each state where a discretion is intrusted to the judge. No classification of offenses can constitute a classification of offenders, and the effect of a period of imprisonment upon the mind and character of a prisoner can in no case be foreseen, nor can it be assumed that the effect, whatever it be, is proportionate to the length of the imprisonment.

Alleged Schools of Criminality.

"Practically, the vast majority of our prisons are but schools of criminality. Nearly the whole of the criminal class, recognized as enemies of society, are the graduates of these schools. Imprisonment in itself has no good effect upon the prisoner's character; it furnishes no stimulus to good conduct or of any kind; it is but a more or less of those who are condemned to it degenerate under its influence. If it is assumed that the effect of prison life is good upon the character, then imprisonment should be applied just so long as it will continue to be a school of criminality. In every such case it is a wrong to send a man to jail. A far better course is to extend the paternal and protective care of the state over these cases through the agency of responsible and trained officers. In this spirit the well-known probation law of Massachusetts has been framed, and it is gradually imitating in the legislatures of other states. It has done much to diminish juvenile offenses and crimes in Massachusetts and in England, and promises to be one of the most potent methods by which the state can seek to eliminate criminality.

Paroling Prisoners.

"The system of paroling prisoners under conditioned release after they have served part of their terms with credit, and before they are widely practiced in many countries. It has been found an important auxiliary to the reformatory work of the best conducted penal institutions. But its best use is in connection with institutions where the indeterminate sentence. This process, in connection with the best reformatory institutions of the country, has been found to result in the entire re-establishment of a large majority of those who have enjoyed its benefits.

Brief Addresses.

The reading of the paper was followed by short speeches by many of the delegates. Gen. Drinkerhoff of Ohio commended the recommendations of the report, but said for the successful operation of the plan approved by it there is needed a corps of trained men to administer the affairs of the prisons. In England policies do not interfere with prison administration, and in France there are schools for the training of prison officials. He thought there might be such schools here. Thomas E. Ellison of Fort Wayne, Ind., suggested the need of friendly help by the state toward criminals who are deterred from crime by the indeterminate sentence. He hoped it would be extended to other states.

Represents Prison Commission.

Col. C. B. McHardy, chairman of the prison commission of Scotland, was warmly received by the conference, and his objection to being referred to as a foreigner called forth applause. He said he could not comment on the recommendations of the report as the ideas it contained were new to him. During the last year 110,000 cases occupied the prison authorities for drunkenness and disorder, which class of cases he said he was sorry to say was the peculiar feature of the criminal statistics of Scotland.

Major Sylvester, superintendent of police of this city, was called on and responded briefly. He said he proposed to inaugurate having been prepared by Mr. E. P. Wentworth, superintendent of the State Reform School at Portland, Me., who was unable to be present.

State Reform School at Booneville, Mo.,

Mr. Wm. G. Fairbank, superintendent of the State Industrial School for Girls at Middletown, Conn., read a paper on "Girls' Reformatories and Their Inherent Characteristics."

It pays to read the want columns of The Star. Hundreds of situations are filled through them.

Section Meetings.

Section meetings were held on the subjects of juvenile reformatories and needy families in their homes. Mr. Ira Otterson read a paper on "The Reform School Officer." What He Should Be and How to Get Him." He pointed out the qualifications of the reform school officer, and said he should not be a politician in the way of belonging to any political machine.

The section meeting conducted by the committee on "needy families in their homes" was devoted to a general offering of the experiences of the delegates on the subject of "Friendly Visiting" on the part of charitable workers.

A large number of the delegates visited the National Junior Republic at Annapolis, Md., this afternoon.

The closing session of the conference will
